Weather and daylight

Prague in March sees a turn in the weather, it will steadily get warmer. It can eventually be freezing but there will not be the intense minus 10 C periods anymore but along with the increase in temperature it will become slightly wetter and more windy. With an average temperature of 12 degrees C and bring your umbrella or rainproof jacket. Daytime temperatures can be anything between 5 and 23 degrees Celsius so check your 10 day weather forecast to see what's coming. However if you are outside in the sun you can still expect a fresh wind and evenings will be cold so you might be able to get away with a jumper and a light jacket.

Spring is coming and between 10 and 15 March 2020 the sun in Prague rises around 06:20 and sets around 18:00, there are about 11 hours and 45 minutes of daylight.

What to buy?

In case you are looking for some tips, what to bring home - there is abundance of high-quality handicrafts to get all your gift buying done in Prague. Of course, there are plenty of generic mugs, magnets and kitsch items on display which could make a nice present, but for an authentic Prague souvenir you really can't go wrong with Marionettes, Becherovka Herbal Liqueur or Bohemian Glass.

Traveling around Prague – using public transport

Prague has one of the best public transportation systems in Europe operated by Prague Public Transport Company (DPP). It is easy, reliable and affordable, frequent, punctual, clean and safe. The metro, trams and buses cover the majority of the city and outskirts. The network is quite busy and carries almost 3 million passengers daily.

The different types of transport are very well integrated. Everything is logically laid out and clearly signed making the system very easy to understand. On-board displays and announcements on metro trains, trams and buses make missing a required stop very unlikely.

However, be aware that on the trams and buses the name of the next stop is announced together with the current stop which might be a bit misleading especially for those who don't understand Czech. On the metro, the next stop is announced after the doors are closed and the train is on its way so it is more clear. Current stop is announced just with its name. The next stop is announced as "Příští zastávka - Staroměstská" that means "Next stop - Staroměstská". The announcements are automatic and recorded by professional speakers, so they are clear and as easy to understand as possible.

The public transport operates between 5 am and midnight, but there are also special night lines (buses and trams only).

Scheme of the network is here: https://czech-transport.com/images/airport_schem.pdf

If you are on-line then use this engine for finding your way and Prague Public Transport website (English version) <http://spojeni.dpp.cz/ConnForm.aspx?tt=PID&cl=E5>

Metro lines

The Prague Metro network consists of three lines designated by letters and represented by colour:

- Green Line A (Nemocnice Motol - Depo Hostivař)
- Yellow Line B (Zličín - Černý Most)
- Red Line C (Letňany - Háje)

Line A is the most popular with tourists as it serves Prague Castle (Malostranska), The Old Town (Staromestska), Wenceslas Square (Mustek, Muzeum) as well as connecting with bus 119 to/from the airport at Nadrazi Veleslavin. You can transfer between lines at Mústek station (lines A and B), Muzeum station (lines A and C) and Florenc station (lines B and C).

Tickets

- 24 Kč - Valid for 30 minutes on metro, tram, bus, night lines and funicular railway. Transfers allowed.
- 32 Kč - Valid for 90 minutes on metro, tram, bus and funicular railway. Transfers allowed.
- 110 Kč - Valid for 24 hours on metro, tram, bus and funicular railway. Transfers allowed. Luggage included.
- 310 Kč - Valid for 72 hours on metro, tram, bus and funicular railway. Transfers allowed. Luggage included.

please note that senior over 70 years of age can travel for free on Prague public transport (age must be proved with a EU identity card, permanent residence permit, a passport or a proof of special fare entitlement for seniors of over 70).

Tickets are sold in the DPP information booths, automatic machines at the stations of trams, buses or in the entrance of the metro stations, but also in any tobacco store, and in some hotels. There is also an SMS option, but there is an obligation to have a CZECH SIM card only. Please note that NH hotel reception also sells tickets.

Important!!! Validation and Inspection

All tickets must be “validated” which means that they must be inserted into the yellow stamping machine inside trams and buses or at the metro stations when first used. Tickets MUST NOT be re-stamped when transferring services or starting a new journey within the validity period (another stamp on the same ticket, would make the tickets invalid). The tickets are to be stamped in the direction of the arrow printed on them.

Plain Clothes Ticket inspectors, identified by an official badge and a special identification card they have to show on request, regularly check passengers and are authorised to fine a passenger without a valid ticket up to 1500Kč (reduced to 800Kč if paid on the spot) so the passenger must carry the ticket at all times. Please note that ticket inspections are quite frequent.

Eating out in Prague

Traditional Czech cuisine is not the healthiest in the world, as it can be a bit heavy for some visitors (forget about your diet here!); however it goes perfectly with the most popular Czech drink – beer!

Avoid tourist oriented restaurants in the Old Town Square, Wenceslas Square or near the Prague Castle, as they are unreasonably overpriced. It is not that difficult to find “hidden” restaurants where locals like to go and where you will not spend a fortune. These “local hot spots” can be found right in the center of Prague.

There are many traditional pubs that offer Czech dishes as well as restaurants offering international cuisine, neat bars, cozy cafés or simple fast food and sausage stands just waiting for you to give them a try!

Some recommendations (In addition to good Czech food, they usually serve tank beer (often, unpasteurized), making the Czech beer drinking experience all the more enjoyable.)

Bredovský Dvůr: Just a block away from popular Wenceslas Square, but with a different feel from the high-traffic tourist areas. Try to go during lunch as there are inexpensive lunch menus and you'll be enjoying your meal with locals on their lunch break. Address: Bredovský Dvůr, Politických vězňů 13 (parallel street to Wenceslas Square), Prague 1

Na Verandach: This restaurant is right at the Staropramen brewery, so you know the beer is fresh. Hearty food, too. Address: Na Verandach, Nadrazní 84, Prague 5 (Smíchov)

Olympia: Nice Czech pub serving both Czech and continental specialties. Address: Olympia Kolkovna, Vítězná 7, Praha 1 (Ujezd)

Pivovarský Klub: Features hundreds of beers (Czech and international) on the menu. Ask the waiter for advice if you get paralyzed on what to order. This place also has good and reasonably priced Czech food, too.

Address: Pivovarský Klub, Krizikova 17, Praha 8 – Karlín

Kavárna Mlýnská: This isn't so much a pub as it is a mill that has been turned into a café near Kampa Park. It's quite close to the touristy areas, but is a local place that serves wonderful unfiltered Bernard beer.

Address: Všešrdova 449, Prague 1

...and one thing that you will see sold in many places around Prague is trdelník.

Trdelník – a soft dough in a cylinder form with cinnamon and sugar- or stuffed with ice-cream and chocolate or fruits and cream. There really is nothing like it in the world (and they seemed to be on every street corner in Prague now!). While they are advertised as “traditional Czech pastry”, it is not necessarily true, they seem to have home somewhere in the Balkans and they were introduced in Prague by early 2005. But they ARE TASTY.

ENJOY YOUR STAY!
